

DAVID WAMALWA WANJALA

My name is David Wamalwa Wanjala.

I'm the last born in a family of seven children, born on 8th July, 2005. I have three brothers and three sisters. My parents are Francis Wekesa and Judith Nekesa. They are both alive, unfortunately, they are poor. Their influence in my life has been positive and I'm glad they're as part of my life.

From the very moment I stepped in school, my performance has never been in question. Especially in Nursery School, I used to be position one because of my natural wit and the ability to listen keenly to what my teachers taught us. My major setback since then is the poor background I come from. Money is one great asset that helps anyone pursue their dreams and it has never been readily available on our side. We didn't enough funds to pay for school fee. Even during my final year in primary school while in 8th grade, I recall vividly going to school on an empty stomach several times. I also used to wake up very early in the morning and walk bare-footed to school which was quite far.

These challenges only became my stepping stone towards the greater victory God had in store for me. I worked tirelessly and indeed managed to get a good score in my final exams of Kenya Certificate for Primary Education. I scored 359 marks which I knew would enable me stand a good chance of joining Living Hope High School. I did the interview and I'm so happy that I was accepted to join this great institution within our locality. I expect to pass my exams very well and continue with my custom of good performance.

LHHS is close to where I live, therefore this made it easier for me to know it better in addition to its good reputation among the local residents who always give a good report of how well it performs, both in the local and national exams since it was found. In primary school, I worked hard to ensure I'd be able to join here. My parents and all siblings knew I had that goal. Indeed hard work pays and here I am, ready to realize one of my many dreams in the bare daylight.

I've gifts in singing and dancing. I also like trying computer stuffs. My ambitions are becoming a pilot. No human is limited and I'm certain my dreams are valid no matter the circumstances. I'm good at Mathematics, Science and English because I find them easy to read and understand. I am of Christian background and my faith in God has helped me by getting the knowledge on how I can better my relationship with God. I cherish in my parents and siblings as role models for the good pieces of advice they give me at all times.

I'm of great honor to my parents because, much as they only attained low levels of education, they always give it a priority to us and do whatever it takes to ensure me and my siblings, who also do well in their respective schools, are upto date with academic affairs. Some of my siblings have finished Form Four but can't proceed further to due high tuition fee and other requirements needed that my parents cannot afford. I have high hope and belief that someday after school, I'm going to be of great help to my family.

That's why I wish to join LHHS.

I've experienced chest problem since I was eight years old and I pray this won't affect my studies in any way when I join High School.

Kindly offer me any necessary support and I'll be grateful. I won't let you, God and the school down. Bless you.
